Kolkhozes of the republic considerably exceeded the 1950 plan for plowing new land. Fourteen percent more plowing was completed than in the fall of 1949; 28 percent more winter grain crops were sown, and 35 percent more wheat was sown than in 1949. The plans for expansion of tea plantations -- 1950 plantings and preparation of the soil for future plantings -- were fulfilled. The plans for planting fruit orchards and vineyards were also completed. The plans for soil preparation for the regeneration of citrus plantings were exceeded.

More feed for collectivized animal husbandry was procured by kolkhozes than in 1949. Four percent more coarse fodder for conversion into hay was procured than in 1949, but the procurement plan was not met. In 1950, 20 percent more ensilage was stored than in 1949. The 1950 plan for storing ensilage was exceeded.

Construction projects in the republic fulfilled 99 percent of the 1950 plan for centralized capital construction, including 99.8 percent by Union projects and 98 percent by republic projects.
